About AP-PPN:

The AP-PPN, founded in 2016, is an international scholarly association devoted to the advancement of public policy through the collaboration of scholars in the Asia-Pacific region. The main goals of the AP-PPN are to promote scientific research in the field of public policy and to organize events and activities in which members of the regional public policy community can interact. The Association is a non-profit organization managed by a Steering Committee of its members and is supported by Departments and Schools in the region as well as international affiliate organizations such as the International Political Science Association and the International Public Policy Association (see a list of sponsors and additional information at <http://www.asiapacificppn.org>). The Association supports public policy research through its own publications and mail list.
